

Reading Support at Home Guides

'Parents as partners.'

Children in either the 'Learning to Reading' (generally 4-8 year olds) or 'Reading to Learn' (generally 8+ unless they have a specific learning difficulty) phase need practice and guidance one-on-one at home in a comfortable, supportive setting. 'Parents as Partners' in the literacy process is a publication put out by First Steps to support children across the stages of literacy and language development. This booklet contains a sample of specifics to guide parents to helping reading development at home. NOT everything is suitable for every child. Please see your educator if you would like more specifics about your own child's reading level (especially once your child CAN read fluently there are still lots of ideas to develop and vocabulary to decode.) We have a copy of the book in the Take Home Packs (based in our new Gathering room where your Family Message boxes now reside.) Leonie is happy to run workshops about literacy development if requested with small groups of parents or parents can individually book a learning team meeting on Wednesdays 2pm. Happy reading together!
